

Australian South Sea Islanders - Chronological achievements 2011-2015

OUR ORGANISATION: The Australian South Sea Islanders – Port Jackson (ASSI-PJ) represent the interests and human rights of Australian South Sea Islander (ASSI) people. It seeks to promote ASSI culture and identity as a culturally distinct group within Australia. ASSI-PJ works to ensure the ongoing social, economic, political and cultural wellbeing of ASSI people.

The term “Australian South Sea Islander” (ASSI) refers to the Australian descendants of people brought to Australia from the Pacific as indentured slave laborers in 1847 (through Benjamin Boyd). Recruited to work and establish Australia’s sugar cane, maritime and pastoral industries. Today’s ASSI descendants trace their heritage across more than 80 Western Pacific islands including the Solomon Islands, Vanuatu (formerly the New Hebrides) in Melanesia, the Loyalty Islands, Samoa, Kiribati, Rotuma (Fiji), Tuvalu in Polynesia and Micronesia.

ASSI share a unique cultural relationship with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities. This evident cultural kinship with Australia’s First Nations Peoples is born out of an interconnected, socio-political history that has transformed the demographic genealogies through this labor trade and resultant inter-marriage. Today the most significant ASSI ‘colony’ is on Mua (St Pauls) Island, in the Torres Straits which saw an influx of South Sea Islanders transported there for pearling and bêche-de-mer industries through the London Missionary Society from 1870 onwards.

The socio-historical impact of Australia’s indentured labor history, akin to slavery has left ASSI people marginalized, unrecognized, and even unknown to exist as citizens of Australia, with their significant labor contribution to the nation’s economic base hidden in history, and their own history hidden even from themselves as a community.

OUR BOARD - MRS BONITA MABO, AO ASSI.PJ patron and eminent leader, renowned for her tireless commitment to her communities and support of the revolutionary Mabo Land Rights case. Aunty Bonita’s continued work was recognised by the Commonwealth Government receiving an Order of Australia, granted during the significant 150th year of recognition for ASSI. EMELDA DAVIS (president) has worked across a number of Federal and State Government initiatives delivering community development projects via education, training, media and sport platforms. DANNY TOGO (vice president) brings 20 years’ experience in logistics and office management. MELINA FAKATAVA (secretary) 15 years in customer service and production management. SHOLA DIOP (treasurer) recent Winthrop University division one scholarship recipient and graduate with honors and life time membership to the internationally recognised Beta Gamma Sigma Business Society is currently employed by one of the big four worldwide accounting firms Ernst and Young. SHIREEN MALAMOO (board / elder) former ATSIC Commissioner continues her 40 plus years of community work for the Justice Health Board and the Bobby Sykes Foundation in Sydney and has been instrumental in her role on the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Advisory Panel to the City of Sydney in having the word ‘Invasion’ included in the Cities corporate plan preamble. Shireen’s network profiles have been instrumental in opening doors for ASSI.PJ in Sydney particularly.
